Keywords: Essential Information, Disposition Effect Shifting of Investor Decision in Pandemic

Abstract: The current pandemic era has given uncertainty to the country's economic growth and resulted in many countries experiencing a drastic decline in share prices. This condition impacts investors' perceptions of the funds that have invested in the stock market. This study investigates the effect of essential information and disposition effect on shifting decision investment with the character investor's moderation as the moderator variable. A survey was conducted on 252 investors who have invested in the Indonesian stock exchange. The Data processing used the partial least square (PLS) technique. This study indicates that essential information for investors in the pandemic era can increase the disposition effect in deciding beneficial share ownership. The essential information obtained by investors in the covid era regarding stock market movements and its internal performance in the stock market list can increase investor shifting decisions. The disposition effect can have a significant effect on shifting decision investors. Essential information related to stock price movements and its internal performance affects investors' courage to take risks and provide optimism for shifting decisions. Then the investor type does not affect the disposition effect on shifting decisions. This study contributes to the theory of financial behavior in decision making by considering psychological factors when uncertainty exists in stock market

Dear Authors

We inform you the article has been accepted, but need revision.

Reviewer # 1

The title should be changed to the effect of essential information and disposition effect on shifting decision investment.

The order of keywords is written alphabetically

The references used are very good with the latest research, but need an explanation related to essential information

Add explanations related to financial behavior and investment using the latest previous research results

Descriptive analysis needs to be added to each variable, in order to describe the perceptions of investors

Reviewer # 2

The phenomenon of research results has been explained well based on the results of previous studies, but needs a more detailed explanation regarding essential information

The format does not match, so it needs to be done carefully or you can use the APC team

Descriptive analysis needs to be added to the analysis and discussion.

Sincerely

Sadjadi
